

Columbia Law School
Postdoctoral Research Scholar
Millstein Center

Columbia Law School's Millstein Center seeks a Postdoctoral Fellow to take on an integral role in the Center's ongoing research on corporate governance; private capital markets; environmental, social, and sustainability issues; and more.

The Millstein Center Postdoctoral Fellowship aims to cultivate the next generation of leading business law scholars. The Fellowship is designed to support recent law graduates who have demonstrated a strong interest in legal scholarship. It particularly supports the training and development of prospective law professors. The Fellow will have business law faculty mentors who support the Fellow on the market; office space and a research budget; and full involvement in faculty workshops, academic activities, libraries, and research facilities.

The Fellow will commit to working with the Millstein Center's Executive Director, Director, and the Faculty Co-Directors to produce applied research, pedagogy, and other outputs that will assist the Center in producing various research reports. Successful performance will require both assisting with ongoing projects and generating original research, as well as communicating research findings clearly and through a variety of media and formats to a range of audiences in a manner that maximizes impact, as well as contributing to the University's wider research and convening efforts.

The Fellow's activities will include:

- conducting sophisticated and in-depth academically focused research into corporate governance; corporate environmental, social, and sustainability issues; private capital markets; and more;
- publishing supporting analyses and resources in academic and practitioner-oriented publications, as well as Millstein Center work product; conducting research-related outreach and communicating research findings to the Millstein Center Advisory Board and to relevant professional networks and associations; and
- supporting other Center projects and initiatives.

This is a two-year appointment, commencing in the summer of 2024.

We are seeking applications for candidates with a J.D. or equivalent legal degree, as well as strong research and analytical skills, with a demonstrated ability to synthesize, categorize and do basic analysis on data and information. The candidate should have a maximum of three years of experience post-terminal degree.

Interested candidates should email their cover letter and resume to:
