IRA M. MILLSTEIN CENTER
for Global Markets and Corporate Ownership

Annual Report 2018

About the Millstein Center

Our Mission

The role of the corporation in society is undergoing profound change. With a seismic shift towards the concentration of corporate ownership in the hands of institutional investors and the private ownership of companies, corporate boards and management are facing unprecedented shareholder and societal demands. This includes the proliferation of shareholder activism and institutional investor calls for sustainable investment strategies.

The mission of the Millstein Center is to positively shape and influence the future of the corporation in this new paradigm. Through engagement with business leaders, corporate boards, investors, the legal community, and academics, the Center creates meaningful dialogue, while balancing conflicting points of view, to strengthen corporate governance and performance.

The Center achieves this mission through a two-pronged approach. First, through engagement with corporate leaders on the most pressing issues facing corporations today, the Center creates the networks, best practices, and tools necessary for those leaders to successfully navigate these challenges. Second, the Center addresses critical research questions, bridging the gap between academics and practitioners, and bringing academic rigor to the business and policy solutions required.

Programs: Engaging with Corporate Leaders

The Millstein Center holds programs aimed at key decision makers within the corporation who can utilize their business judgment to address the challenges companies face through active engagement in strategy, capital allocation, and culture shift for the long-term future. Currently, the Center's programs consist of the Board Leadership Forum, the General Counsel Summit, and the Governance Leadership Forum. Find more on the Center's programs here.

Research: Bridging the Gap Between Academics and Practitioners

The Millstein Center is a premier research institution focused on the wide array of issues facing corporations and the capital markets today. The role and structure of corporate ownership is being redefined in a manner not seen in over a century, and the Millstein Center is on the forefront of the cutting-edge academic research needed to develop the business and policy solutions required. Our current areas of focus include the Future of the Corporation Project, which examines the future of the corporation in the context of shifting ownership towards institutional investors and private ownership, and the Counter-Narratives Project, which focuses on alternative theories to the conventional shareholder primacy paradigm. Find more on the Center's research here. The Millstein Center is also the proud host of the Commonsense Principles of Corporate Governance 2.0.

Message from Our Leadership

We are excited to update you after a very active 2018, which brought about positive change here at the Millstein Center.

David Nierenberg, the longest serving member of the Washington State Investment Board and Founder of Nierenberg Investment Management Company, was elected Chairman of the Advisory Board in December 2017. We thank David's predecessor, Bill McCracken, for his leadership and service to the Millstein Center and look forward to continuing to work with Bill as an Advisory Board member.

Our new Executive Director, Kristin Bresnahan, joined us in May from Cleary Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton LLP, where she worked for over five years on a wide range of litigation and enforcement matters for corporate and sovereign clients. We also welcomed our new Assistant Director, Brea Hinricks, who also practiced at Cleary Gottlieb and specialized in the structuring, formation, and operation of private investment funds.

The Center was joined this year by our newest Postdoctoral Fellow, Julian Nyarko, whose research focuses on analyzing international and domestic contracts using quantitative and data science methods such as text analysis and machine learning. We are excited to continue working with our Postdoctoral Fellow Geeyoung Min, whose research examines whether current federal and state laws, combined with companies' corporate governance arrangements, are effective in alleviating agency problems.

The Center expanded its advisory board to include a diverse group of 6 new board members in 2018 and 4 new board members in 2017, each of whom brings a unique perspective and serves as a valuable asset to the Center:

- Mila Brogan, Vice President of Administration, in charge of Governance Risk, Compliance & HR, at the Central Park Conservancy and former Executive Director of the Millstein Center;
- Russ Carson, General Partner at Welsh, Carson, Anderson & Stowe;
- Peter Georgescu, Chairman Emeritus of Young & Rubicam;
- Keir Gumbs, Associate General Counsel, Global Corporate, M&A and Securities and Deputy Corporate Secretary at Uber Technologies, Inc.;
- Bonnie Hill, President of B. Hill Enterprises LLC;
- Rakhi Kumar, Senior Managing Director and Head of ESG Investments and Asset Stewardship at State Street Global Advisors;
- Bob McCormick, Managing Director at PJT CamberView;
- Bill McNabb, Former CEO and Chairman of the Board of Vanguard Group;
- Barbara Novick, Vice Chairman at BlackRock; and
- Sarah Williamson, Chief Executive Officer of FCLTGlobal.

We are pleased with the Center's accomplishments in 2018, including:

- the launch of our Future of the Corporation Project, starting with a successful round-table discussion in October exploring the rise of the private markets and followed by the release of the Center's February 2019 white paper laying out our research agenda;

- the release of the Commonsense Principles of Corporate Governance 2.0, hosted by Millstein Center to foster dialogue aimed at harmonizing the various governance principles released by other investor and business groups into a single, cohesive framework; and
- the continued success of our collaboration with Deloitte on the Board Leadership Forum, with sessions featuring bestselling author and Wharton Business School Professor Adam Grant and Bill McNabb in June 2018 and former Ohio Governor John Kasich and cybersecurity expert Ed Powers in December 2018.

In 2019, we launched our new research initiative, the Counter-Narratives Project, at our March 1 conference, which convened experts to explore counter-narratives to the traditional shareholder primacy theory in the context of today's rapidly changing corporate ownership structure and increasing demands on companies.

Throughout 2019, the Center will focus on strengthening our communications strategy and increasing our public profile through academic and business publications, as well as through social media engagement.

We will continue with a full programming calendar in 2019, which will include:

- the launch of the Governance Leadership Forum, which will convene a peer network of nominating and governance committee board chairs to discuss their unique challenges and opportunities for exerting a positive influence in the boardroom;
- a May 2019 session of the Board Leadership Forum featuring activist investor Nelson Peltz and a regional Board Leadership Forum in Houston; and
- a May 2019 session of the General Counsel Forum session featuring Bruce Sewell, Former Senior Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary at Apple, Inc., and Bill McNabb, former CEO and Chairman of Vanguard Group.

On behalf of the Millstein Center community, we thank you for your continued support in making the Center a true focal point for the cutting-edge research and high-level engagement with corporate leaders needed to address today's urgent governance challenges. We are grateful for the support of Columbia Law School and all of our sponsors, including Deloitte, the CFA Institute, and Weil, Gotshal & Manges LLP, without whom our work would not be possible.

Launched the Future of the Corporation Project

With a seismic shift towards concentration of corporate ownership by institutional investors and private ownership of companies, corporate boards and management face unprecedented shareholder and societal demands. Through the Future of the Corporation Project, the Millstein Center seeks to define how future corporations should look in this new paradigm, proposing a new forward-looking narrative about the purpose and governance of the corporation.

A main theme of this new initiative, the rise of the importance of the private markets, was the subject of our inaugural round-table kicking off the Project on October 26, 2018. At this round-table, the Millstein Center convened 30 participants from academia, regulatory agencies, and leading private equity and venture capital firms to formulate the initial research agenda. (See the day's agenda here.)

The Center's February 2019 white paper, Private Ownership at a Public Crossroads: Studying the Rapidly Evolving World of Corporate Ownership, outlines the path forward following that initial round-table and identifies specific topics for additional research, allowing the Center to systematically study the transition towards the private capital markets, the institutional and governance arrangements which govern the businesses funded there, and their implications for law and regulation.

Released Commonsense Principles of Corporate Governance 2.0

Beginning in 2018, the Millstein Center proudly hosts the Commonsense Principles of Corporate Governance 2.0. In the initial draft of the Commonsense Principles in 2016, the signatories—some of America's largest corporations and institutional investors—set forth corporate governance principles which they believed would serve the best interests of America's public corporations and financial markets. They hoped to and did encourage a larger dialogue about the responsibilities of corporations and their boards and investors to move away from short-termism toward a long-term and more inclusive vision for growth and prosperity. Now, an even larger group of signatories is coming together, this time with an updated set of Principles and a further call to action to keep the dialogue going, and to work towards harmonization with the principles released by other investor and business groups.

As host, the Center strongly encourages companies and investors to apply the Principles in their businesses and to continue important conversation around these issues. The Center especially emphasizes the signatories' call for the harmonization of the Commonsense Principles 2.0 with the Investor Stewardship Group's Framework for U.S. Stewardship and Governance and the Business Roundtable's Principles of Corporate Governance and looks forward to facilitating and participating in that process.

Successfully Continued the Board Leadership Forum

The Millstein Center, in partnership with Deloitte, held two successful sessions of the Board Leadership Forum in 2018. In June, bestselling author and Wharton Business School Professor Adam Grant led a discussion on leading boards with courage, and Bill McNabb, Chairman and former CEO of Vanguard, provided an investor's perspective of the chairman and lead director role.

At the December Forum, former Ohio Governor John Kasich and former Virginia Congressman Tom Davis hosted a conversation about lessons in leadership and navigating our changing political climate. Ed Powers, Deloitte's Risk and Financial Advisory Cyber Risk Services Leader, led a dialogue focused on the board's role in managing cyber risk.

Launched the Climate Risk Disclosure Project

Millstein Center Faculty Co-Director Eric Talley and Postdoctoral Fellow Julian Nyarko are collaborating on a new research project aimed at developing tools to determine which public companies have been making the climate risk disclosures envisioned by the SEC's 2010 interpretive guidance. Using survey-based data and a textual analysis of companies' SEC filings, they will create an objective framework for assessing which companies should be making these climate risk disclosures and develop insights into the incentives of and compliance with the current regulatory framework surrounding climate change.

Hosted Student-Focused Events

In 2018, the Millstein Center hosted three student-focused events:

- Women in M&A Panel Discussion: Presented in collaboration with the American Bar Association's Women in M&A Task Force, this panel featured distinguished women practicing M&A at top law firms who discussed strategies for success inspired by their own challenges and accomplishments, how to prepare for a career in M&A, balancing a demanding career with a fulfilling personal life, finding mentors, and more.
- Mock M&A Negotiation: Before an audience of law students, faculty, and outside attendees from corporate legal departments, a panel of seasoned mergers and acquisitions lawyers from major North American law firms staged an interactive "mock negotiation" illustrating the "give-and-take" in a contentious negotiation involving a middle-market acquisition of a privately held company.
- Accountable Capitalism Act Lunch Presentation: Millstein Center Faculty Co-Director Jeff Gordon and Professor Katharina Pistor hosted a lunch discussion debating the merits of U.S. Senator Elizabeth Warren's proposed Accountable Capitalism Act.

On the Horizon: 2019

Launch of the Counter-Narratives Project

The Millstein Center's newest research initiative, the Counter-Narratives Project, launched in March 2019. The Project focuses on alternative theories to the conventional shareholder primacy paradigm—the theory that shareholder interests should be prioritized above the interests of all other stakeholders (including debtholders, employees, customers, suppliers, the environment, the community, and the corporation itself). The alternative theories, or “counter-narratives,” are critical of the limited perspective of the shareholder primacy construct and argue that such a narrow view encourages “short-termist” actors and behaviors which have contributed to economic malaise and increasingly skewed distribution of wealth. These counter-narratives propose possible methods of better balancing the interests of all stakeholders and measuring the success of a corporation through means which transcend simple shareholder wealth maximization.

The complex task of mediating the interests of intra-firm constituencies is complicated further by the increasing concentration of corporate ownership in the hands of institutional investors and asset managers, and the increased importance of private capital relative to public markets.

To begin exploring these counter-narratives, and to design a research agenda around them, the Millstein Center convened corporate governance experts at its March 1, 2019 conference, Corporate Governance “Counter-narratives”: On Corporate Purpose and Shareholder Value\(s\), to discuss and debate prominent “counter-narratives” being put forth. The “counter-narrators” included Saïd Business School Professor Colin Mayer, who recently organized a British Academy project on The Future of the Corporation and finished a book called Prosperity: Better Business Makes the Greater Good, and Chief Justice Leo Strine of the Delaware Supreme Court, who wrote a series of articles describing the reality of shareholder power and calling for better use of this power (“investing for the long-term”). SEC Commissioner Robert Jackson, a former Columbia Law Professor and former Executive Director of the Millstein Center, delivered the keynote address.

Inaugural Governance Leadership Forum

The Millstein Center, in partnership with Deloitte, is launching the Governance Leadership Forum in 2019 to bring together chairs of board nominating and governance committees (“Nom-Gov Chairs”) in a peer-to-peer setting twice per year to discuss the challenges and opportunities they face.

Nom-Gov Chairs have a critical but too often overlooked leadership role to play in the identification, recruitment, selection, and evaluation of individual board members. They must ensure that the board achieves the diversity of thought and experience necessary to achieve optimal results. They lead the evaluation and performance review process of the board and its members, assessing and inventorying the current directors’ capabilities relative to the company’s prospective needs. Also, Nom-Gov Chairs can strongly influence the culture in the boardroom and help structure how proactively and where the board spends its valuable time.

This new network will convene Nom-Gov Chairs to discuss these key issues and provide practical information they can use to lead their boards to success. The publication of meeting summaries and research related to these topics and discussions of the Forum will further advance the dialogue and practices around the vital role of the Nom-Gov Chair.

Upcoming Sessions of the Board Leadership Forum

The next session of the Board Leadership Forum, co-sponsored with Deloitte, will be held on May 2, 2019 in New York City. Nelson Peltz, the Founding Partner and Chief Executive Officer at Trian Fund Management, L.P. and non-executive Chairman of The Wendy's Company, will co-lead an interactive discussion focused on activist investing and other topics essential to governance and leadership in the board room.

2019 General Counsel Forum

The next session of the General Counsel Forum, which convenes general counsel from public and private corporations to engage in interactive peer-to-peer sessions, will be held in May in partnership with Cleary Gottlieb. The session will feature Bill McNabb, former CEO and Chairman of Vanguard Group, and Bruce Sewell, former Senior Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary at Apple, Inc.

Center Communications

A focus of the Center in 2019 will be to continue to build a robust communications and outreach strategy through Center publications and social media to ensure that the Center is a focal gathering point for cutting-edge research and robust debate about today's most pressing governance issues.
